Importance of Registered Seed

Alberta farmers are urged by the Government to obtain registered seed wherever possible, for their grain crops. The importance of using the best quality of seed obtainable is emphasized in statements made by the Minister of Agriculture for the province, the officials of the Seed Departments, and of the Seed Growers' Association.

A striking illustration of the value of good seed has been obtained in an experiment which the University has been conducting during the past three seasons. Samples of seed wheat from the University were sent to various places in the province from south to north. The harvested seed was returned and graded, and the samples ran at least one grade better than the average samples coming from the same districts. "Why can't all farmers grow wheat like this?" has been asked. The answer is "So they could, easily, if they would use us good seed."

Amusement Tax

A sum of over 200,000 dollars was paid by the people of the province in amusement tax during the past year; of this amount, the four cities paid something like $150,000.

The gasoline tax brought $423,700 during the year, a considerable increase over the previous year. Automobile licenses brought $1,154,000, there being a total of 64,129 licenses, an increase of more than 11,000 over 1925.

The Alberta Government Telephone System now has a total of 56,930 subscribers, of which 29,413 are rural and 26,517 urban.

Gives Concert From Airplane

Ginger in Machine 4,000 Feet Up Uses New Device

In flight approximately 4,000 feet above the street, John Charles Thomas, concert baritone, sang operatic arias to an audience in Columbus Circle, New York, in the first official test of the "Voice of the Sky," a secret sound-producing and amplifying device which makes possible direct vocal communication between aircraft and any one on the ground.

Thomas sang stately in a cabin of plane, singing and talking into this newly perfected amplifier of the Plane Speech Corporation of Philadelphia, while his audience stood shivering in the frigid blast below.

Despite the fact that the plane was banking at a 45-degree angle, and despite the din of street traffic, the melodies were heard distinctly by the crowds on the sidewalks.

Stella, New York, came down from the sky in stentorian tones. Then to further demonstrate the amplifier, Mr. Thomas while drifting about, addressed his ground audience briefly.

Leaders in the aircraft industry have been demonstrating, Major General John F. O'Rourke, president of the Colonial Air Transport Company of New York, one of whose planes was used in the test, said he believed the "Voice of the Sky" would be of great value in commercial aviation.

"With this device installed in planes on our New York-Easton route, and on the proposed New York to Chicago route," he said, "it will be possible to communicate with the towns and cities over which they pass. As 'No man today for thousands' or smaller spoken messages from the air."

B.C. Depending on Prairie

Their Development Means Greater Advancement for Coast Province. British Columbia is greatly concerned in the peopling and development of the prairie provinces, according to General A. D. McLean, M.P. for North Vancouver.

"In the progress of the prairie provinces," Gen. McLean said, "we owe our great chance of life ahead. We are fully aware of the importance of obtaining Alberta's wheat for shipment through the port of Vancouver."

He said that the prairie cattle would find their way as fresh meat via the Panama Canal to the British market. Both fruit and meat would soon be shipped by this route, he said, as the result of the introduction of a new and efficient cooling system on Pacific coast.

"I realize the gravity of the situation," said Sir Isaac Newton as the falling apple hit him on the head.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

MARCH 6

SHARING THE GOOD NEWS

Golden Text: Ye shall be My witnesses—Acts 1:8.
Lesson: Acts 8:1-5.
Devotional Reading: Isaiah 53:1-7.

Explanations and Comments

1. Sharing the Good News in Samaria, Acts 8:1-5.—Persecution followed the martyrdom of Stephen, and the disciples were forced to flee from Jerusalem. They did not think that the responsibility of witnessing for Christ rested upon the leaders alone, and the entire rank and file went about preaching the word.

Philip, one of "the seven," who became known as Philip the Evangelist, followed the success of his ministry (Acts 21:8), went down to the city of Samaria, and began to preach. He had already come to the fact that he was witnessing for him in Samaria. To overcome their prejudice against the Samaritans, the followers of Jesus needed only to go to Samaria and preach to them.

If you are prejudiced against any one, do him a good deed.

The Samaritans, like the Jews, were looking for the Christ. Philip knew the success of his ministry had already come. Philip probably had read the gospel of the new movement. He was inaugurating what he went down to the city of Samaria and proclaimed unto them the Christ. He found the Jews white unto him, and the people seemed his own.

"It follows as the night the day that a church must be in constant contact with God cannot keep itself about it."

Establishes Home for Blind

Former Jewish Immigrant Afflicted Himself with Blindness

Shelton Needham, stricken blind while travelling to America as an immigrant 25 years ago, is awaiting the opening of the April 1 of the Home of the American Jewish Association for the Blind—his contribution to righteous people of his race.

After being detained at Ellis Island until he failed to post a bond against the possibility of his becoming a public charge, Needham began selling papers at the age of 15. With the money saved from newspaper peddling he founded a printing company in 1912. Eleven years later he began planning construction of the home.

His stay while a boy at the Industrial Home for the Blind in Brooklyn, where he would not eat food prepared there, prompted the idea of an arches Jewish institution for the sightless.

Expect Cheaper Cars
Canadians are to purchase their motor cars a little cheaper as a result of the 20 per cent reduction in sales tax in the Federal and provincial governments.

It was computed in automobile circles that following the tax reduction the retail price of the majority of cars will shortly be reduced from about $2 to $15, or approximately the cost of the automobile license. The sales tax on motor cars is charged on the actual cost to the local dealer, or the daily paid value plus freight and excise tax.

June 15, an eclipse of the moon will be witnessed throughout the United States and Canada at 2:13 a.m., eastern standard time; the moon will be completely hidden by the shadow of the earth. The other eclipse of the moon takes place in December, but will not be visible here.

"No, you won't," Joanna agreed. "Neither shall I. Today would never leave his dark shadow from me, and I'd never get through the ground. And I, fancy, I'll know quite well what a Dominator wants—and needs. Perhaps I'll get it. Perhaps not. Shall we walk through the grounds? I think you said you'd like to see something of the preparation I'm making. While we are about it, I hope you'll choose the place for your seats in my pavilion theatre. I'm sending a little play there that I know you'll love."

They spent an hour on the grounds. It was as if they had forgotten their time at the tea table. Laid their heads on the cushions, and embraced each other, and each foretold of the future thrills promised by each preparation made to the workmen on the Annie lawn. At the pillared pavilion she was sympathetic with the mystery Joanna agreed about the plans which were to have their climax there.

"I shall have Teddy sit close to me to protect me from whatever this rotten temple shall unfold," she threatened. "I shall want to be very close to you," Joanna agreed. And Lady Emily looked at her intently. There was something important in the voice of the Golden Girl.

CHAPTER XXVIII

Memories Again

If the story of Lady Weymouth left its impress upon Joanna, Emily Dolly Kentworth and Teddy Dominator stirred in her. Neither of them knew of the appeal to the Golden Girl, but the sister of one of them, but both, in their separate regard of her, were conscious of a subtle but distinct change in her.

John might have realized it, too. But he was not a sensitive being. And, as the day passed, and the sun drew him closer and closer to his old life, that Joanna was deliberate and merciless, in her resolution of the young man's fate for whose name had so suddenly become known around the house, was apparent to all that saw the circle which waltzes. The glittering services of a Latinian club around the shrine where all is sold that elicits.

As Dominator had treated to her, she Kentworth and Braden had returned, and as soon Lady Weymouth might have said, those who waited were quick to recall. It had been predicted that when the brilliant, always dazzling Young Countess decided to glints of the sun and mingled them with Biny, reddest tint over the whole Mediterranean sea.

"It means something, that that in the atmosphere," Joanna observed. "One of the Mungapores who live here the year count probably would make a prediction of some sort. Every one of them is a weather expert."

They would have spoken, of the haze in the air to one of the natives but in their absorption of the important details of the reshaping of the American grounds, they forgot the embryo mist. As was her custom of late Joanna acknowledged an intrusion a woman and herself. After that first day, the day of his arrival, when her heart was ready to leap to him, but was repulsed, she had been what recent current mood dictated that she should be. At times he put his arms around her, and drew her to him, and then they were absent together. At other times they were parted, today, today, Joanna knew, he was fading with a serious hurt.

The first weeks of his visit had been a calendar of notable occasions for him. The Prince of Monaco, interested always in topics and proposals that he was long and had been honored him with a command audience and had presented him to that distinguished group of nobles and aristocrats, and worthy men of other professions, who gather around him on many parts of the world. It is their tribute to the Prince who is dead, the father of the present ruler of the principality. These occasions, great as they were, were not without the Prince who is dead, the father of the present ruler of the principality. These occasions, great as they were, were not without the Prince who is dead, the father of the present ruler of the principality.

There was some marveling at it, persistence of the hand which held Joanna and Joanna together. Between them there seemed to have arisen nothing. As always they were inseparable, whether at the workmen on the Annie lawn. At the pillared pavilion she was sympathetic with the mystery Joanna agreed about the plans which were to have their climax there.
